Where It All Began. . .

Where Are We Now?

Take a journey through history to discover what our Founding Fathers intended in this magnificent document, the U.S. Constitution. Learn how the three branches of government provide checks and balances to protect our liberty and rights. We must begin teaching the rising generation what our Constitution really means and how it applies to current events.

Almost all the worlds' constitutions are documents in which governments tell the people what their privileges are. Our Constitution is a document in which We the people tell the government what it is allowed to do. — Ronald Reagan

Wendell Griffith,
Professor of History, NWFSC
"The Intent & Interpretation of the Constitution"

Professor Griffith teaches American and European history at Northwest Florida State College and is known for his notorious "Constitution Test". Professor Griffith is knowledgeable and engaging and you will not want to miss this. He will explore the basic principles and share the challenges and intents of our Founding Fathers.

Mike Lawson, Attorney at Law
"The Government of Destruction"

Even the most well intentioned government programs invariably cause more harm than good. Whether it is simple unintended consequences or outright tyranny, history has shown that government all too often is the problem. Using the current government efforts to "regulate" the internet as an example Mike Lawson will demonstrate how the Government's misguided belief that it must solve our problems invariably makes those problems worse, makes us poorer and destroys our freedom.

Brian Ward, Author & founder of Boogai.net
"How America Defines Liberty"

Liberty—a word translated by governments around the globe. Yet, America defines this word much differently than the rest of those governments. The E.U. declares liberties are human rights, but allows for laws to be passed taking those rights away. Let us explore how our government guarantees us the right to Life, Liberty, and the Pursuit of Happiness, which no law, man, or political party can take away.

Larry Allen, Businessman
What is a Right?

Beginning in the 60's we began to see an inordinate emphasis on the idea of rights. Since then we witnessed the greatest government infringement on individual rights in the history of our nation. Larry Allen will look at the definition of rights and explore the following questions: What are the legitimate sources of rights? What rights can be granted by these sources? What legitimate obligations can be imposed by valid rights? Do needs create rights?
